As a successful corporate executive turned professionally certified business psychology coach, Karen understands the complex challenges CEOs and senior managers face. She is uniquely qualified to help high-performing clients reach their greatest potential. Using scientifically proven techniques, her company helps clients identify and resolve unconscious “blind spots” that impede their desired progress or success, with greater velocity than traditional coaching methods.

Karen discovered the keys to achieving greater success in her personal and professional life when she achieved a 28-year dream of competing in, and finishing, the toughest race in the world, the IRONMAN World Championships in Kona, Hawaii. She parlays this experience to the business world and now helps business leaders connect with and realize their own goals, with greater velocity and ease.

Karen Brown rose through the ranks of the retail and commercial real estate industries, becoming one of the youngest leaders at a national $60 million Real Estate Investment Trust (REIT). She honed her coaching and mentoring skills, created high-performing teams and was selected by a $270 billion real estate company to serve as an internationally-certified coach, mentor and consultant to top performers.

With more than 20,000 coaching hours under her belt, she founded Velocity Leadership Consulting in 2012. Karen coaches a select number of clients while delivering international keynotes and presentations to corporations, professional associations and business groups. She is the author of Unlimiting Your Beliefs; 7 Keys to Greater Success in Your Personal and Professional Life, and competes as an international ultra-athlete.

“Realizing our greatest potential lies in tapping into the power of the unconscious mind; it is the gateway through blind spots, which are the barriers to our success.”
